

Status and Privileges of Retired Faculty Members and Librarians

BL-ACA-A8

About This Policy

Effective Dates:

11-21-1978

Last Updated:

Responsible University Office:

Scope

This policy applies to all retired faculty members and librarians on the Bloomington campus.

Policy Statement

Faculty often enter a very productive phase of their scholarly and artistic careers when they retire. Their publications, performances, and creations redound to the reputation of IU and provide an inspiration to colleagues and students. Although the privileges granted retired and emeriti faculty are in part recognition for their past service, they also are intended to encourage emeriti contributions to the intellectual life of this academic community. In pursuit of this goal the Office of the Provost supports Emeriti House, a shared space for retired faculty members offering a rich program of social and academic activities and guest work stations.

Listing

Retired and emeriti faculty members and librarians shall be listed in the following publications of the Bloomington Campus where appropriate:

1. The Indiana University Bulletins of Undergraduate and Graduate Curriculum under the appropriate school and departmental listings.
2. Promotional literature developed by offices of the university when departmental and school listings of faculty are made.
3. All other publications and websites.

Participation

1. Retired faculty and librarians are encouraged to submit Faculty Annual Reports on the usual forms, listing their achievements and honors in the standard manner. Though in no way a requirement, submitting materials helps Indiana University continue to showcase the ongoing contributions of retired faculty.
2. They are invited to participate in Freshman Induction, Founders' Day, Commencement, and other university and campus ceremonies.
3. They are encouraged to participate in Faculty Council and university committees. Participation in official department or school business is decided at the discretion of the academic unit.
4. Retired faculty provide an important academic resource for both current faculty and students. Departments and schools are encouraged to include them in the formal and informal activities of the unit including events such as colloquia, conferences, faculty wide parties, etc. An annual survey should be circulated by the Bloomington Faculty Council to Bloomington area retired faculty and librarians to determine their interest in committee work.

Use of a University Office, Laboratory, or Studio Space

1. Retired faculty seeking on-campus office, laboratory, or studio space should work with their chair, dean, and the Office of Space Planning to see if suitable space can be found. The University will make every reasonable effort to secure work space for retired faculty members.
2. Retired faculty members are entitled to remain in their work spaces for 60 days after retirement. Vacated offices, laboratories, and studios must be left empty and ready for the campus to transition the space for immediate use by a successor faculty member or for other purposes that are deemed necessary for the operation of the university.
3. In disputes pertaining to allocations of space, retired faculty members retain their rights to pursue redress through the Indiana University Bloomington Faculty Grievance and Review Procedures.

Special Benefits

1. The following benefits are at this time extended to retired faculty and librarians.
